As an employer there are good reasons to stay on top of Superannuation Guarantee obligations

$1.3 billion in employee super contributions go unpaid each year. Paying staff super contributions probably isn't the most exciting aspect of running a business but, it pays to get it right. The Australian Taxation Office (ATO) take a dim view of businesses that don't pay staff super.

Businesses that do not comply with their superannuation obligations may be liable to pay the Super Guarantee charge. As an existing or new business owner you should consider read more

Do you own a holiday rental property?

The Australian Taxation Office (ATO) are contacting owners of rental properties in popular holiday locations to notify them that they can only claim deductions for periods the property is rented or genuinely available for rent. With the summer period over and the end of the financial year looming, do you know what category your holiday home falls under? read more
